

About Us

- ⌘ November 2010 marks the 150th Anniversary of one of the key events leading up to the commencement of the American Civil War – the election of Abraham Lincoln as the 16th President of the United States.
- ⌘ Before the end of the year, South Carolina seceded from the Union. Before Lincoln assumed office in March 1861, six more states seceded.
- ⌘ So began the greatest American drama. Americans fighting Americans on American soil.
- ⌘ SevenScoreandTenYearsAgo.com will do for the Civil War what CNN does for present day news—report and deliver it each day, as it happened exactly 150 years ago.
- ⌘ This is NOT a history site but a NEWS site where each day, during the period of 2010 to 2015, the headlines, the reporting and the commentary will be of that date 150 years ago.
- ⌘ In short, today’s world will be able to relive the Civil War, as if it were happening NOW and reported via modern Internet-based forms and means of communication.
- ⌘ Viewers will receive email headlines, alerts and social media feeds that report the events of each day – as if it happened just moments ago.
- ⌘ Reporting will cover not only the various “theatres” of the war, from the front lines to the home fronts, both North and South, but also unfolding developments in Washington, DC and Richmond, VA, as well as in Europe.
