

Dr. Danielle Sheypuk

Licensed Psychologist

•
Experienced Media Commentator

•
Ms. Wheelchair New York
2012

"Dating, relationships, and sexuality are fundamental to our health and happiness as human beings. Evidenced in the multitude of television shows and movies, pop culture tells us that it is a universal struggle of significant magnitude. But grappling with 'finding the one' and feeling fulfilled sexually is more than just the plot of a hit television show, it is essential to our emotional and physical well-being." - Dr. Danielle Sheypuk

Danielle's Bio At-a-Glance

- New York Resident Since 2000
- Licensed Psychologist Specializing in Dating, Relationships, and Sexuality among the Physically Disabled Community
- Brings a Unique Personal Perspective, Based on Her Own Experience and Advocacy as a Young NYC Professional Living with a Physical Disability
- Expert Commentator on a Wide Range of Topics in Human Psychology, General and Specific
- Featured on Television, Radio, Newspapers, Online Media
- Selected Ms. Wheelchair New York in May 2012
- Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology (2009), The New School for Social Research, New York, NY
- B.S. in Clinical Psychology (2000), Marywood University, Scranton, PA

Danielle is employed full-time at the Bensonhurst Outpatient Clinic of South Beach Psychiatric Center, which is part of the New York State Office of Mental Health

“While there have been many campaigns designed to improve the lives of people with physical disabilities, very little attention had been paid to improving their romantic relationships.

“As a commentator for the news media, I will advocate for the recognition and improvement of this important facet of life.”

“Like those arriving at Ellis Island, I came to Manhattan hoping for a land of opportunity and finding a freedom from the constraints of attempting to date with a physical disability. Since my arrival in New York City more than 11 years ago, I have been fortunate enough to put myself out there on the dating scene. My experience and struggles with dating and relationships has taught me that this is a widespread problem, not one relegated to small towns like Scranton, and this problem has become my passion. My personal struggles are supported by the literature on the topic, and my campaign will focus on several key dimensions that are of critical importance.” - Dr. Danielle Sheypuk

Dr. Danielle Sheypuk is available for media interviews as an expert in the clinical psychology of dating, relationships and sexuality.

Her representation is through Tranquility49 LLC, 28 West 39th Street, 4th Floor, New York, NY 10018.

For all media inquiries and speaking opportunities, please contact Patrick A. Berzinski, 201-232-2297 (cell), or patrick@tranquility49.com

TRANQUILITY49